Henry H. Neff has created engaging characters with a strong plot that's kept me reading well past the first book. (I'm currently on the 4th book of this series and can't wait to see how all the threads get woven together in the end.) While Max may not seem like the strongest lead character in the first book, I loved watching him grow into his gifts as his story progresses.

Henry H. Neff's capabilities improve with every book he writes. The Maelstrom is not my favorite of the Tapestry series. I'm never sure if that's The Fiend and the Forge or The Red Winter. But it's a solid entry with few real weaknesses. By The Maelstrom, Neff is deep into his own world creation, and he has created a rich, original landscape that bears little resemblance to the Harry Potter ...

Henry Neff has become one of my favorite authors. This book was the long awaited conclusion to his Tapestry series. While I am disappointed that I couldn't get this in hardcover to join the rest of the series on my shelf, it was satisfying to finally get the rest of Max's story. I highly recommend this series. I know I will be reading it many more times.
